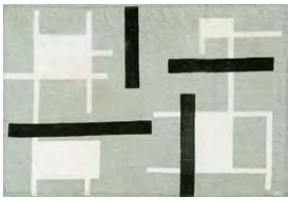
St Ives Modro System™ HP534/HP543

The St Ives Modro System™ is inspired by a Barbara Hepworth textile design. The concept for this unique modular design comes from Rosie Irving, designed by Rosie Irving and Antonia Young. Haddonstone transformed the design into a three dimensional form for use initially as part of the Chelsea Fringe, courtesy of Vauxhall One, before it was moved to Tate Britain for the duration of the acclaimed "Barbara Hepworth: Sculpture for a Modern World" exhibition in 2015. Born in 1903, Hepworth lived in St Ives from 1949 until her death in 1975. Normally supplied by Haddonstone in contrasting Portland and Slate colours reflecting the original Barbara Hepworth design. The Portland elements are smooth, whilst the Slate elements have a defined textured surface. Being a modular system, a client can either recreate the Barbara Hepworth design in its entirety or just use certain elements, either to create an entirely new shape or to just use a particular segment of the original, see below. Mechanical lifting on site is required in all instances.

Section: 450mm x 300mm (17¾" x 11$^{13}/_{16}$")
Overall Length: 10840mm (427")

Maximum Height: 450mm (17¾")
Total Weight: 17,000kg (37,445 lbs)

Overall Width: 7350mm (289")
Weight per metre: 315kg (694 lbs)



Inspiration came from this original Barbara Hepworth textile design.

GARDEN & LANDSCAPE PEDESTALS AND PLINTHS

IMPORTANT PEDESTAL SITING It is essential that your Haddonstone pedestal is sited on a firm and level area to suit site conditions and loadings. An 8 to 1 sand/cement bedding mortar should be used to ensure that the weight of the pedestal and urn is spread evenly across the base of the pedestal, avoiding any pivoting or twisting strain between stone components and between stone and floor. We cannot accept responsibility for cracking or breakage if this instruction is ignored. Technical Sheets available for all Athenian and Olympian pedestals.
